Dan Boyle appointed at PERAC

Joins Agency as its new IT Director

Executive Director Joseph E. Connarton is pleased to announce that Mr. Daniel Boyle has joined PERAC's staff as its new Information Technology Director. Mr. Boyle replaces Mr. Paul Laliberte who retired from the agency in August of 2014.

Mr. Boyle has over 19 years of experience in the information technology industry working on various types of projects ranging from infrastructure deployment to application development. Most recently he worked for the past 5 years as IT Director at the Executive Office of Education (EOE). His duties included overseeing various IT functions including application development, data warehousing, database administration and systems engineering.

Mr. Boyle spearheaded several initiatives at EOE including identity management, portal, and an enterprise data integration project. He also has previous experience in various industries including financial services, healthcare, telecommunications and education. He has a B.S. in civil engineering from UMass Lowell.

Executive Director Joseph E. Connarton welcomed Dan Boyle to the staff:

"I am pleased that Dan Boyle has joined the PERAC Team as our new IT Director. While we recently said farewell to our long-time Director Paul Laliberte, we are pleased to have been able to attract such an experienced and capable replacement as Dan Boyle.

Not only does Dan bring extensive private sector experience to the agency, but in addition, he has worked in IT at the Teachers' Retirement System and at the Massachusetts Executive Office of Education. Dan is no stranger to State Government and its unique administrative challenges.

I know that the Commission and the entire staff join me in welcoming Dan Boyle to the PERAC Team. He is already hard at work on numerous projects and we are certain that he will uphold the great performance and responsiveness that we have come to expect here at PERAC from our IT team."
